Light weight columns of Sapa

Did you know that the specific weight of aluminium is approximately 33% of that of steel? The typical weight of a column with a height of 6 meters is approximately 20 kilograms. Light weight is an advantage as less kilos of metal are needed than in case of a steel column.

Because of the light weight of aluminium it is not needed to hire a crane for the installation of columns. Most of the columns up to 6 meters can be installed by hand (see image below).

LED's the Future Thermal Management

Electronic equipment gets increasingly smaller and hotter. Heat dissipation becomes a major problem. Extruded aluminium is an excellent heat dissipater in itself and Sapa Thermal Management has developed a unique extrusion technique that allow for coolers with long, thin fins. Since Sapa Thermal Management is involved in developing cooling solutions for LED-lighting we have a joint effort in making solutions for outdoor, and indoor, lighting. For more information please visit the Thermal Management website.
